Editor Special Note

Welcome to another Issue of Afghanistan UK Bridge Magazine. October is here and as we approach the darker and shorter days of the year we are reminded that the end of 2017 is around the corner and we must balance what we did during this year and what we could have done better.

The Afghanistan Summit on Supply Chain and Construction that took place in June 2012 was the beginning of the country's private sector wave of actively promoting international logistics solutions to Afghanistan producers but there is still a long way to go – what means more than anything else, more opportunities to make money.

Conceiving new ways of promoting the production, storage and transportation of services and goods is a money-making business that can be yours or from which you can explore the potential.

This money-making business is a natural stage of economic development of all societies and Afghanistan producers need Afghan Expats and Foreign Investors willing to assist them in exporting their products out of the country and into Europe's shops at the lowest cost possible and in the most efficient way.

We listed the main sources of funding for setting up Foundations, Micro Credit Groups, Loan Companies, Merchant Banks and much more. The earliest you apply the better. We remit you to previous issues where we listed the Merchant Banking and Business Licenses Rules and Authorities in Afghanistan, mainly Da Afghanistan Central Bank.

The Gurus presented in this Issue are a must and all literature mentioned in relation to them is available free online. They are so good you might want to consider following them on LinkedIn.

The Afghan Sikh Journey is revised candidly by two fantastic journalists who unveil a generational journey of discovery of the Past and expansion into the Present.

Learn from Gundara the most well-kept secrets for success. Their story is truly inspiring so if you are looking for inspiration and motivation to get into Business in Afghanistan – look no further!

Stay tuned!

Transforming supply chains using blockchain technology

#ibmblockchain

Transportation of Goods and Workers is a problem that needs solutions at all levels, from logistical to Social Responsibility. How would you plan the effective transportation of these workers and their products from say Kafid to Khost?

SUPPLY CHAIN MANAGEMENT

The following Schemes are skeletal presentations of models suitable for developed economies where all infrastructures are already established and war is not a key factor in the Logistics Agents mobilization.

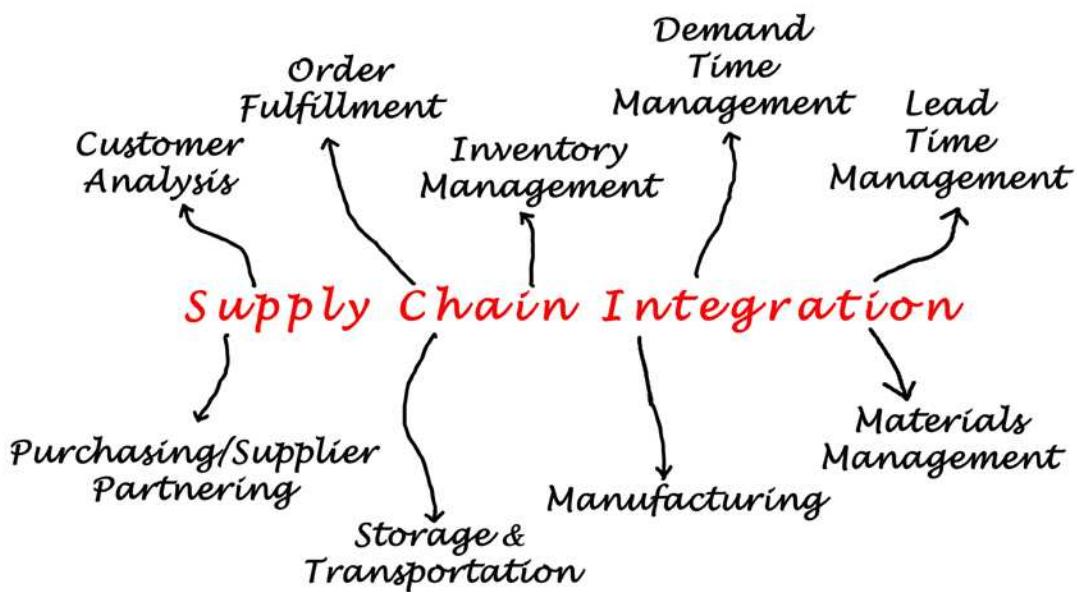

In the United Kingdom we seem to take for granted the block chain services and cloud platform facilities Banks offer to international businesses.

If I was to elaborate a Supply Chain Management model linking Afghanistan producers with International Traders , most likely I would create my own channels and routes. Buy land from one end to the other of Afghanistan , build a massive National highway road and charge users for security and access. Processing and transformative industries between point A and B would be a must. Does this sound megalomaniac or just Futuristic in essence?

But what would you take in account if you were planning to develop a supply chain route of goods from Afghanistan to the UK and what would you require to secure high standards production , storage and distribution of goods? Who would you partner with and how would you negotiate with your suppliers for higher profits for your company? How would you keep the producers safe? Rural producers in Afghanistan are exploited by foreign producers of near by countries who rely on cheap pistachios, nuts and cotton to meet their export demands. If you are to bring a social enterprise or business into these rural areas you have to expect gang related activities like sabotage of transport vehicles, intimidation and blackmail of your workers. What security firm would you hire to ensure your business safety and would you use formal American soldiers as employees or you would hire locally?

Our Magazine does not hold all the answers for the potential contingency problems you can face in Afghanistan rural provinces but we can recommend the best at the level of conception and prevention of supply chain failures and successes in developing countries. And the best recommendation and advice we can give you is to read Khalid Zidan book 'Supply Chain Management – Case Studies of International Supply Chain Organizations'. The book is sold via amazon but is also available online for free download.

Khalid Zidan is a Procurement Manager at AECOM, Amplex Emirates LLC. You can follow him on social media or establish a professional relationship with him via LinkedIn.

His book 'Supply Chain Management – Case Studies of International Supply Chain Organizations' is accessible at all levels , so either you know nothing or everything about Supply Chain you stil find the book a useful tool , respectively as an introduction to or a guide to elaborating a successfult Supply Chain Management Business Model coherent with the reality of Developing Countries like Afghanistan.

Khalid Zidan definded Supply Management as management focused on ‘ the fullfillment of customer demands by using the resources efficiently’. In this context he defined Logistics as ‘ a term that is applied to activities within an organization or company that are related to the distribution of the product , whereas the supply chain itself also includes proucurement and management’.

Drawing your Logistics Operational Business Model requires security awareness, coherent case studies but also inclusive software. And what do we mean by Inclusive software? We would define inclusive software as a software capable of catering and including users with different levels of expertise and with limited access to modern communication infrastructures. Here we remit you to our previous magazine ‘ Fintech Special Issue’ where we brought to light how Fintech could solve most of Afghanistan’s producers communication and financial services problems.

The integration and coexistence of telecomms users and internet users in the same Logistics cloud is vital in securing Afghanistan producers access to international logistics.

You might feel that setting up such a financially demanding project is something that will prove very cost inneficient. However, the International Logistics Ecosystem is expanding in a very competetive Imperialistic aggressive way and this movement is relying in entrepeneurs in search of financing and partnerships.

Agility is one of these International Logistics Companies with a multi billion portfolio successfully expanding internationally at the expenses of successful partnerships with small local companies and Entrepeneurs .

Agility's Two Lines of Business

Air Freight Products

Value Added Services

What started as a Kuwait Government initiative decades ago turned into a private international logistics business surviving everything possible and imaginable going wrong : Terrorism, Iraq military invasion, geopolitical sudden changes and setbacks . Agility survived to rise into an International successful and powerful Company constantly invading and succeeding in the most volatile industries as aviation and Real Estate.

It's not a must that you partner with Big International names as Agility Logistics. Other companies in Afghanistan pursue the same policy of welcoming proposals for partnerships.

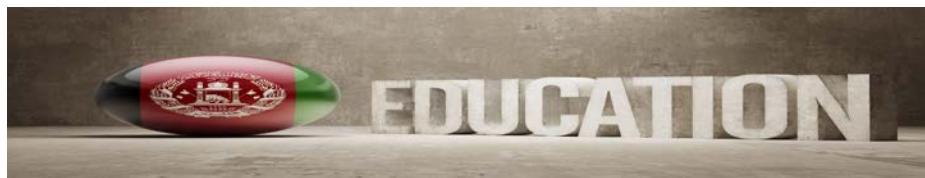

Afghan AS Logistics, Cargo and Transportation Company is a successful privately owned Company represented worldwide. Their services provide complete solutions to Afghan suppliers and to Western importers and traders. This Company based in Kabul welcomes business partnerships from all over the world regardless of their size and capital. They privilege operability, commerciality and professionalism over anything else.

These core values are Universal but in Developing countries they are bent over unforseen contingencies . For example, a silly mistake as buying seeds that cause soil erosion can bring a harvest season of hell to the entire province rural economy relying on exporters credit and good faith micro loans. Difficulty there are softwares that can antecipate the most unpredictabale disasters and man made pure evil incidents but Supply Chain software producers are rapidly approaching that point where the most unbelievable prediction can be made by weather forecasting, elections pools and international companies stock performances.

IBM sells different types of Logistics and Supply Chain softwares and provides warehousing and business networking solutions compatible with other cloud platforms as Santander Bank clould. Whatever you prioritise during the market research for your Business projects always bear in mind that contracts can be good and bad to your business and that most sellers today will give you a shorter version of their extended contracts and often -what is really what you might need if you are new in the sector -a trial period.

If during the trial period you decide you don't need all the services you are paying for, than is more than wise to keep the costs down and cancel your business subscription to the services. The business network of your ecosystem might prove quite all you need to establish a solid team of key players in a game where there are no permanent team members unless you are monopolising the sector.

Hindu Kush to Thames -a journey into the heart of Afghan Sikh and Hindu communities in London

Harkiran Kaur Sodhi reports

My first year at UC Berkeley, I enrolled in a course offered once every four years: History and Culture of Afghanistan. From then began a safari of desperately seeking every possible grain of knowledge pertaining to the country. However, I remained deprived on one aspect – the Sikh community of Afghanistan. After doing countless presentations based on whatever I could find, I discovered Pritpal Singh's efforts and depiction from a Sikh perspective. I was elated. Mission Afghanistan finally introduced the Afghan Sikh community to the world. Following up on Mission Afghanistan's coverage of the plight of Sikhs living in Afghanistan, 'From Hindu Kush to Thames' sheds light on those who have emigrated. It is a one-of-a-kind documentary on a non-Punjabi Sikh immigrant population.

Once known for its thriving trade routes and culture, Afghanistan has now become known for its turbulent political history, causing many Afghans to migrate. Thousands of miles away from the homeland however, a small community of Afghan Sikhs and Hindus have preserved the culture and traditions of the dwindling community.

Of Mission Afghanistan (see video) fame, Pritpal Singh focuses again on the Afghan Sikh and Hindu communities, but this time through the lens of Afghan immigrants to the UK, particularly Southall. By carefully juxtaposing the life left behind, with life in their adopted homes, the sacrifices and struggles are masked with vibrant displays of faith, music, food and dance. With touching depictions of the dilapidated Mandirs and Gurdwaras in Kabul, and impressive retention of their roots throughout generations on foreign soil, 'Hindu Kush to Thames' presents the story of immigrants who are rarely covered in Afghan mainstream media, or Sikh media.

Sikhs have been a vital part of the Afghan community. With interjections by historian Harbans Singh Handa, the audience learns of the various political positions held by Sikhs over the years in Afghanistan, even visiting the British home of the 3rd Sikh MP of Afghanistan: Gajender Singh. Other prominent personalities such as Inder Geet Singh are also introduced alongside second generation British-Afghans.

Strongly reflecting Afghan pride and ancestry, the documentary is primarily filmed in Farsi with English narration. 'Hindu Kush to Thames' is filmed and directed by Ariadne Bechthold with support of the Gharghasht Gharghakht and Afghan Voice Radio, UK. Strongly reflecting the shared sense of nostalgia amongst all the Afghans, the documentary shows their connectedness with home. Often misunderstood to have immigrated from India, this is the story of Afghanistan's religious minorities who have immigrated to London and made a name for themselves.

GUNDARA

German International Business Discloses Best Kept Secret: Fair Supply Chain! German Writer Elinette Van De Noort reports

We bring you Gundara, a well-known brand featured in the most popular German Magazines like Elle , with leather products distributed in Europe's high streets, shopping malls and designer outlets. The fact this Business story started in Afghanistan and that succeeded in such amount of short time is something we could not pass by, so we had to chase Gundara for a story and what we got first was a Love story!

In your own word Gunda, please tell us how all started for Gundara.

Gunda Amos . Hello! My husband Jean and I met in Kabul in 2005. In the beginning of 2006 we discovered the workshop of Master Yaqub. I started designing a few bags for myself. My husband was impressed by the great quality of the vegetable tanned Afghan leather and Master Yaqub's traditional Afghan craftsmanship. He then had the idea to create a small catalogue which we started showing to friends and family in Europe. The feedback was extremely positive. Master Yaqub was producing very nice leather bags, but not many people were buying them. We then had the idea to support Master Yaqub, by bringing his products to the international market through better marketing. The idea was to combine Afghan craftsmanship with European demands for functionality and aesthetics. The concept worked very well. The Gundara online shop has been running since 2009 and in 2015 my husband and I opened the first Gundara Concept Store at Schlesische Str. 25 in Berlin-Kreuzberg.

Elinette: You mentioned you both met in Afghanistan but your husband is from France and you are from Germany. Give us a biographic summary of your lives and professional profile.

Gunda Amos: My husband is a 41-year-old Geographer from France. He is passionate about Gundara, and currently works full time in our shop. He designed the web shop by himself and runs all operations like Marketing. He is very busy as we now distribute to over 23 shops and networks brands as Superstore in Berlin and we export our products, in the quality of wholesalers, to top capitals of Europe like Scotland, Luxembourg and Switzerland. I am a 38-year-old German Political Scientist who met her husband in Afghanistan and fell in love with the country as well. I share my work in the German Ministry of Development with Gundara shop management.

Yusto Yaqub , is an Afghan Leather Producer, Father of six lovely children and an example of resistance, survival and geniality. He and his family lost everything except their lives when they found themselves as Refugees in Pakistan. When the family returned to Afghanistan Yaqub decided to provide for his family the best way he knew and started producing leather bags, artefacts in the heart of Kabul. His workshop has seen it all but his heart is faithful to the belief that Afghanistan is a blessed country that will soon find Peace. He is a true inspiration.

Elinette: This month Afghanistan UK Bridge Magazine is introducing Afghanistan Top Players in the sphere of International Supply Chain. If a Procurement Officer was to approach you and offer you a cloud platform, bigger profits, less fairness for Afghan Producers would you take it or your Business has a strong Fair Chain Ethics?

Gunda Amos: As we put it in our Business Statement we always Buy directly from producers. Gundara aims at keeping the value chain as short as possible. 90% of our products come directly from the producers (small manufactures and social cooperatives) in developing countries. Like this the producers can make the highest possible profit.

Our producers get a guaranteed minimum price, independent of fluctuations on the world market. With our public relations we create awareness of unfair trade relations and for the power of changing unfair production and trade conditions through informed choices when shopping. We sensitize our clients for a more fair world trade.

No child labor: We do not accept kids under 13 to be working and we do not accept forced labor.

Social standards: Through its cooperation with partners in developing countries Gundara promotes the voluntary and independent organization of producers (e.g. in trade unions) and fair trade conditions.

Environmental standards: Gundara promotes the processing of natural materials such as leather (particularly naturally tanned), wool, silk etc. We care about what happens to the alkalis from the tanning process and check whether they are disposed properly. We use only used packaging and do almost all transports within Berlin by bike. We use electricity from alternative energy sources (hydro, solar and wind) exclusively.

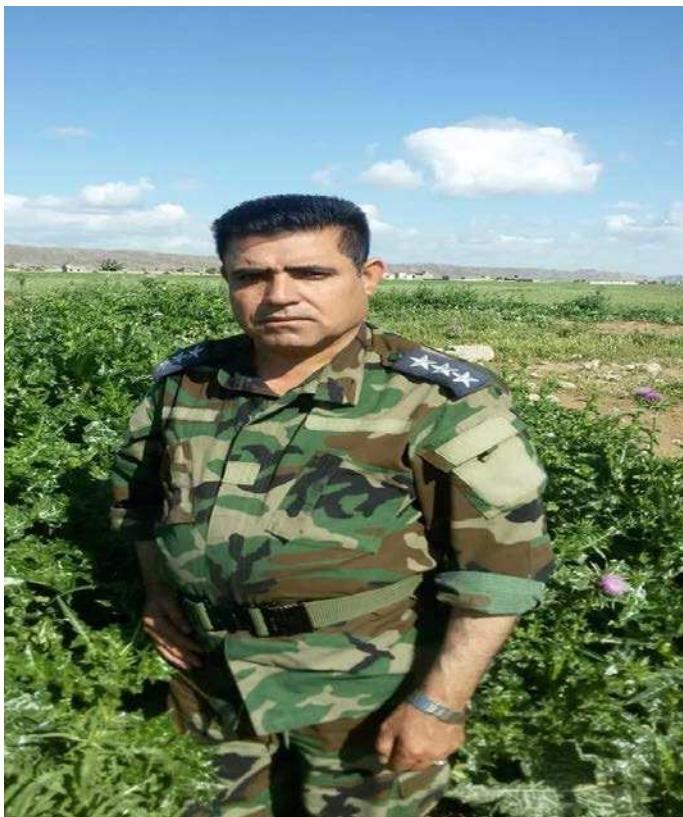

Elinette : Dr Gundara Amos, was a true pleasure to share the story of your International Business with our readers. What an honor!
